PARIS. (U.P.)—The snug, close fit of Schiaparelli clothes is ensured this year by zipper fastenings. They zip up and down side seams, in diagonal lines on evening gowns that are cut on the bias, they close pockets of country suits and sports clothes and are even found occasionally on shoulder seams.

One sleeveless gown fastens cleverly in the back with a zipper which, if pulled high makes a dinner dress, while if the zipper is pulled down to make a low, nude back, the dress becomes appropriate for formal evening wear.

Another evening gown is shown in bright yellow georgette with the front bodice draped to a high, square neck and the back left bare. The dress is fitted closely to just below the knees where the material is gathered to the back to form four cascades of drapes which emerge in a semi-train. A zipper runs from the back to the beginning of the train. With the gown is worn one of the new mesh hair nets which, in this case, is of yellow chenille and gold threads held in position by a gold laurel leaf, studded in semi-precious stone.

Then, there is a burgundy red velvet evening gown with a squared neck achieved by pleats. It is worn with a short tailored jacket of bright blue felt which flares out below the fitted waist.

TODAY'S FASHION TIP

Schiaparelli fastens all the clothes in the mid-season collection with zippers.
